ELIZABETH TIMME
LA-Más

LA-Más is a Los Angeles urban design non-profit focused on empowering lower-income and working class families who struggle to find affordable homes to rent or for whom walking is a primary mode of transportation. The architectural projects of LA-Más provide accessible affordable housing and support the pedestrian right of way. This talk will explore how these built environments address the city's social instability. A reception will follow.

Elizabeth Timme is co-founder and co-executive director of LA-Más. She also teaches at Woodbury University's School of Architecture and serves on the Zoning Advisory Committee of Re:Code LA, a city-led effort to transform the city's outdated zoning code.
