

INTERDISCIPLINARY Humanities
CENTER

RFG Talk:

Consensus without Collaboration? The Future of Emotion Research from the Perspective of History

JAN
11
WED

4:00 – 5:30 PM

Zoom

Learn more: bit.ly/EIH-RFG

ROB BODDICE

Tampere University, Finland

In recent years, multiple disciplines have converged on a biocultural understanding of human emotion, sensation and experience, but knowledge production in disciplinary silos remains. This talk is about the discipline of history's positionality in this budding, if unwitting, consensus among social neuroscientists, social psychologists, transcultural psychiatrists, neurophilosophers, and social scientists. Positioning history as a bridge builder, it nevertheless outlines the significant obstacles to genuine transdisciplinary collaboration.

Rob Boddice (Ph.D., FRHistS) is Senior Research Fellow at the Academy of Finland Centre of Excellence in the History of Experience, Tampere University, Finland. A leading scholar in the history of emotions, he is the author/editor of 13 books, including Knowing Pain: A History of Sensation, Emotion, and Experience.

Sponsored by the IHC's Emotions in History Research Focus Group

